

KENSRI SCHOOL & COLLEGE

Jane Jones: The Girl who keeps going...

In the year of 2008 a young girl of barely three years of age, with her cropped hair and bright eyes, stepped onto the grounds of KENSRI School and College with a determined grin, and now, fifteen years later, she continues with the same conviction that has guided her through thick and thin, and her name is Jane Jones. Blazing through the competition, she has gotten top ranks in national and international Olympiad levels, consistently gotten awards for being the DAILY Child and Best Scholar throughout the years and has most recently topped the school after getting a percentage of 99.6 in her CBSE 10th Board Exams, the third highest score in the country. Not one tuition class was required by the unwavering learner to reach where she is. Her diligent and consistent approach, that included not relying on memorization and instead, understanding the concept, practicing as many questions as humanly possible, giving priority to subjects that one is weak in and listening to the teacher's every word, even the little ones, with rapt attention, proved to be invaluable to her. She also encourages aspiring students to learn from her mistakes; ignoring easier concepts and not rechecking answer sheets, not to mention, scratching out answers for new ones, only to find out the initial judgment was correct are all blunders that can be avoided by staying cautious while also trusting your gut. The seventeen-year-old prodigy has secured 99.78% in JEE Mains. She now aims to crack her next challenge, JEE Advanced after which she hopes to join the Indian Institute of Science and fulfil her ultimate dream of becoming a Scientist. The curious case of Jane Jones encourages us to follow one simple yet powerful process: Dream big, stay focused and make it happen.
